Ampcontrol has signed on to support the Newcastle Jets as a Major Sponsor for the upcoming 2022/23 Isuzu UTE A-League season, signalling the second year of partnership between the two Hunter-based organisations.

As Australia's largest privately-owned electrical engineering company, Ampcontrol and the Newcastle Jets are both looking to the future for expansion and accomplishment.

The Ampcontrol logo will be proudly displayed on the front of the Newcastle Jets A-League Men's Away and Alternate playing jersey. This season, the Jets will be donning a predominantly white away kit with gold stripes down the centre of the jersey, while the third kit is royal blue accented by red and gold.

Rod Henderson, Ampcontrol Managing Director & CEO, is excited for the second year of partnership between Ampcontrol and the Newcastle Jets.

"Sport is incredibly important for our people and community. As Ampcontrol continues to strive for innovation, expanding into new industries, the opportunity to be a major sponsor for a second consecutive year speaks to the possibilities on the horizon for our business," says Mr Henderson

Shane Mattiske, Newcastle Jets Executive Chairman said he welcomes having Ampcontrol on board as a Major Partner of the men's A-League team away jersey for a second season.

The 2022/23 Isuzu UTE A-League season kicks off this weekend with the Newcastle Jets proudly displaying Ampcontrol on the front of their Away jersey as they take on the Central Coast Mariners at Central Coast Stadium on Saturday 8 October 2022.

"We're amped to be alongside this great club, supporting the growth and success of the Newcastle Jets and the A-League. We can't wait to see the boys proudly wearing Ampcontrol in their first game of the season," says Mr Henderson.
